

Jesus said, "Let the little children come to me, and do not hinder them, for the kingdom of heaven belongs to such as these" (Matthew 19:14).

Hello St. Andrew Catholic Community,

Please see below article from Dr. Colon:

During the months of April and May, parents can carry out a series of activities to support their children's education and work as a team with teachers. Here are some suggestions:

During the months of April and May, parents can support their children's education and collaborate with teachers in several ways. It's crucial to maintain regular communication with teachers to understand children's academic progress and address any specific needs. Additionally, parents can assist with daily homework, establish routines including study and rest time, and promote reading at home.

Encouraging complementary educational activities such as museum visits or participation in extracurricular programs also enriches children's learning. It's important to get involved in school projects, providing support with research and presentation, thus fostering teamwork and collaboration skills.

Furthermore, promoting creativity through artistic activities and limiting screen time to encourage a healthy balance between technology and other activities is essential. Monitoring children's mental and emotional health is crucial, creating a supportive family environment where they feel comfortable expressing their emotions.

By working as a team with teachers and providing a supportive home environment, parents can significantly contribute to their children's academic and personal success during these months and beyond.

Blessings,
Mrs. Gipson
